PARIS, January 31.
REPORT OF COL. SEBASTIANI

The supplement to the Moniteur of the 30th of Jan. contains the report made to the First Consul, by Colonel Sebastiani, on the objects of his mission, and the different occurrences that took place in the course of it. The report begins with an account of the voyage to Tripoli, and mentions the different transactions with the Bey, and the satisfactory arrangement of the differences between that Sovereign and the head of the French Republic and his allies. The history of these transactions we have already given in detail; the remaining proceedings being entirely new, we will give them, as far as they appear to us important, in the words of the report itself. Sebastiani says:

"The Pacha of Tripoli is a brave and enterprising man, and a friend to the French. The English have given assistance to his brother, who is now at Derna, destitute of means and of credit. His project was to raise an insurrection against the Bey. The political and administrative affairs of the regency are managed by Serd Muhammed Deghais, Minister of the Pacha. This man is full of sagacity, and has even some notion of the politics of Europe. He has travelled in France, and he preserves the feelings of a ruling affection for our country.

"On the 2d of October I departed from Tripoli, and on the 16th I arrived at Alexandria. On the same day I waited on General Stuart, commandant of the English forces by sea and land. I communicated to him the orders of the minister of foreign relations, which enjoined me to repair to Alexandria, and, if the English still occupied that place, to demand the speedy evacuation of it, and the fulfilment of the treaty of Amiens.

"At first General Stuart told me that the evacuation of the place would be put in execution in a short time; but feeling that I insisted and required a less vague answer, he declared to me, that he had no orders from his court to quit Alexandria, and that he ever counted on passing the winter there. General Stuart is a man of middling capacity. He has for his Aide de Camp, a French emigrant, called the Chevalier de Sates, a man of sense, and an enemy to France, who has much influence over his General.

"On the same day I went to see Kourchich Ahmed, Pacha of Alexandria, and the captain Bey, commandant of the Ottoman forces. After the usual compliments, and some agreeable expressions with respect to the Porte, I informed them that French commercial agents were about to come and settle in Egypt. This communication gave them the greatest pleasure, and they did not affect to conceal from me the pain with which they beheld the stay of the English in this country. I informed them that this stay could not be of much longer duration, and that the general peace left no doubt of their speedy departure.

"On the 20th I set out for Cairo, escorted by two Turkish officers and six French soldiers, whom I took from on board the frigates; contrary winds obliged me to return to port.

"On the 23d I arrived at Faone where I saw the commandant of the place, the Cadi, and the Cheiks. I received from them, last, and from all with whom I conversed, professions of attachment to the First Consul.

"On the 25th I saw at Menouf the Cheik Abdia, whom the First Consul had appointed Cadi. The other Cheiks of the town came to visit me at his house, and spoke to me in the same language as the Cheiks of Faone. I said to them— "The First Consul loves your country much, he speaks of it frequently; he interests himself much in your happiness; he will by no means forget you, and he will recommend you to the Porte. He has made peace with Europe, and this country shall feel the benefits of the interest he takes in it, and of the remembrance which he preserves of the poor Cheiks of Egypt."

"I arrived on the same day at Boujak, from whence I immediately dispatched Citizen Joubert, to give notice of my approach to the Pacha of Cairo. On the morning of the following day the Pacha sent an escort of 300 cavalry and 200 infantry, commanded by the principal officers of his household, to accompany me to his residence, whither they proceeded.

me, amidst a great number of discharges of artillery. On my arrival at the Pacha's house, I addressed him in the following terms.

"Peace has been concluded between the French republic and the Sublime Porte. The ancient relations of amity and commerce are about to be re-established, and I am charged by the Great Consul Bonaparte, to assure you of his good wishes, and to announce to you the arrival of French Commercial Commissioners in Egypt."

"The Pacha answered, 'the benevolence with which the First Consul honours me, penetrates me with gratitude, and his commercial agents shall receive in this place the most friendly welcome.'"

"On the 26th, in a second interview with the Pacha, I addressed him in these terms. The First Consul takes a lively interest in you and the country which you govern, and desires to contribute to your happiness; he has charged me to offer his mediation to make peace between you and the Beys.

"The Pacha thanked me warmly and sincerely for the interest of the First Consul; but he protested to me that he had the most positive orders from his Court to make a war of extermination on the Beys, and to enter into no terms with them. I observed to him that the unfortunate affairs which had taken place with respect to the Ottoman troops (they had been beaten 5 times by the Mamelukes) rendered their position very critical, and that this obstinacy exposed him, to the loss of the province. He then communicated to me the orders of the Porte, and I saw beyond a doubt that it was not possible for him to agree to any accommodation. I informed him that I intended to see the different Cheiks of Cairo, as well as Madame Murad Bey. He immediately gave orders that the guard, which he had sent to me should accompany me wherever I choose to go, telling me, that he should be enchanted at being able to contribute to render my stay at Cairo agreeable.

"On the same day I commenced my visits with the Cheik Abdalaei Chercario, of the Grand Mosque. As I was expected at his house, he had caused a considerable number of Cheiks to assemble there. The conversation turned on the interest which the First Consul takes, in the state of Egypt, his power, his glory, and his esteem and good will for the learned Cheiks of Cairo.

"Their answers expressed their attachment for his person; and it would be necessary to have been, like me, an eye witness of the enthusiasm which the sight of the portrait of the first consul excited, to be able to form an idea of the height of their feelings on the occasion. I bestowed on all the principal Cheiks of Cairo, and of the towns through which I passed.

"Citizens Joubert and Berge assured me that the inhabitants of Cairo had never shown so much attachment to the French as since my arrival. When we passed through the streets every one saluted us. The astrologers every day made predictions concerning the first Consul.

"On the 27th I went to visit Madame Murad Bey. Her attendant had already waited on me, to request me to grant her an interview. I informed her, that the first consul had charged me to interpose my mediation to make peace, between the Beys and the Sublime Porte, but that the Pacha had orders not to enter into any negotiation."

[It is necessary here to notice, that the days omitted in our extract from M. Sebastiani's journal, were employed in visiting the forts, garrisons, and other military posts, of the actual state of the fortifications of which, and the nature and strength of their present garrisons, he gives the most particular account. At Cairo he employed the remainder of the day, on which he visited Madame Murad Bey, in examining the Citadel, the Isle of Roda, Gize, Boulak, and all the other little forts that surround the town. "The Turkish soldiers," says he "grumbled at seeing me go through the fortifications and inspect the forts in this manner; but I pretended I did not hear them, and continued my course and my observations.]

"On the 27th, on my return from Fort Doupay, a soldier threatened me with his atagane. As he had the appearance of being intoxicated, and as the inhabitants of the town showed the highest indignation against him I took no notice of his threats, and continued my course. A moment after Mustapha Oukil, one of the first men of the town, passed before me on horse back.

"As he passed, he reproached my fratres with walking before a Christian, and above all a Frenchman, and above all threatened them with a ballad after my departure. I thought I should not be silent on such an insult; and on my return home I sent Citizen Joubert to the Pacha with my complaint and to require a prompt reparation. I declared to him that this man should come to me publicly to demand pardon, place himself at my disposal, and implore my pity. It appeared that Mustapha was strongly protected by the Pacha, and efforts were made to arrange the matter otherwise; but I insisted, declaring formally to the Pacha that if this reparation was not made in the manner in which I had determined it, I should depart immediately and write to Paris and Constantinople to complain. This declaration produced all the effect I expected: & Mustapha, terrified came to my house the next morning, conducted by Mr. Routti: he publicly asked pardon of me, and put himself at my disposal. I said to him, that my first design was to have his head cut off and that I had granted his life only to the solicitations of the Pacha and M. Routti; but that if it ever should happen again that he should insult a Frenchman, his destruction was inevitable.

"This affair became immediately known in the town and produced the best effects.

"The same day an attempt was made to excite the Albanians to a mobbish insurrection against me. Two letters from Rosetta, written by persons under the protection of the English, affirmed, that a French fleet of 300 sail had been despatched from the coasts of Anatolia; that we were marching against Constantinople; and that the only intention of my stay in Egypt was to deceive them in regard to the dangers with which they were menaced. I sent for the merchant who had received this letter. I requested him to deliver it to me. He complied. I sent that instant to the Pacha, to say, that news absurdly false, were propagated in order to excite disorders, and to produce dissension between France and the Porte: but that, on my life, I could affirm them to be false.

"The Pacha was aware of the trick, and was not duped by it. He even communicated to me a letter he had received from Gen. Stuart, and to which was subjoined the First Consul's order of the day, at the time when he had the command of the Army of the East. That order of the day was for Frocidor, in the 7th year of the existence of the Republic. It reminded the Egyptians that Constantinople was tributary to Ambia, and that the time was arrived at which to restore to the East its ancient ascendancy, & to destroy the Empire of the Osmanlis in the East. Gen. Stuart requested the Pacha to consider the true import of that order, and from it to judge of the sincerity of our professions, and of our peace with the Turks.

"I could not, without indignation, see a military man belonging to one of the most enlightened and polished nations in Europe, thus debase himself to provoke assassinations so dishonorable. He failed of his aim. The Pacha, to the very moment of my departure, treated me with the most flattering kindness. The English Commissary at Cairo, witnessed the attachment of the inhabitants of that city to the French.

"The two persons who have now the greatest influence with the Pacha are Rosette and Maharouki. They both hate France, and are mutually hostile to each other; Rosette is generally believed to have betrayed the Beys, and to be at present sincerely in the interests of the Osmanlis. Yet he manages so as to secure the favor of the Mamelukes if they should prevail. He is now concerned with the Pacha in a traffic of grain and fustian, by which he has, within a very short time, added some millions of livres to his fortune.

"Sherif Effendi was, before my departure, named Pacha of Jeddah, & is succeeded by Najah Effendi, who was on his way to Cairo. He refused the appointment, and intended, after a pilgrimage to Mecca, to return to Constantinople. Mahammed, Pacha of Cairo, was a Georgian slave, had his education in the house of the Captain Pacha, to whose interests he is devoted; and, in character strongly resembles his master. Sheik El Sada requested me to send Colonel Joubert to visit him; and to him, he protested, that he had still the warmest attachment to the First Consul's person. "That great distinguished only by the benefits which he bestowed. My country ought to remember him only as her benefactor. He was just, and he was good."

"All the Sheiks whom I saw, made complaints against the Turks.

"Zouf Bekir, formerly Intendant for the First Consul, is Mutesseb or Director of the police of Cairo.

"I had recommended the Monks of Mount Sinai to the Pacha. A deputation of them waited upon me. I wrote to their superior, to assure them of the First Consul's kindness and protection. The monks of the Propaganda at Cairo, I replaced under the protection of the French nation, as they were before the war: They celebrated a solemn service, and sang Te Deum in honor of the First Consul. I was present at the ceremony; and it was attended by all the Christians in Cairo. I assured the fathers, that they should enjoy all their ancient privileges.

"On the evening before my departure, I again saw the Pacha. I recommended to his favour all the Christians, and all the Turks who had shown kindness to the French in Egypt. He promised due respect to my recommendation.

"At Damietta, I visited Ahmed Pacha Illebil, a creature of the grand Vizier. He returned my visit next day. I was on the best terms with him, during the whole of my stay there.

"I was visited on the 17th by a son of Hassan Toubar, who still retains his wanted influence with the inhabitants on the borders of the lake Menfale.

"At Damietta, are two Christians, Messrs. Bazile and Don Bazile, men of wealth and influence.

"In all Egypt, Chiefs, Merchants, Ulama and people, all talk with pleasure of the first Consul, and express the strongest wish for his welfare. All news concerning him are most eagerly heard and propagated at Damietta, Alexandria, &c.

"On the morning of the 29th, I dispatched Citizens Joubert and Lagrange to Ghezar Pacha with a letter, in which I informed him, that peace being concluded between France & the Porte, the relations of commerce were about to be established on the same footing as before the war, and that I was commissioned by the First Consul to confer with him on that subject. I entreated him to acquaint me by letter, if he was disposed to an interview with me. Citizens Joubert and Lagrange returned some hours after. Ghezar received them coolly enough. He told them I might come to him, but he would give them only a verbal answer. Every one advised me to see him without a written assurance under his own hand; but notwithstanding these coward cautions, and his obstinate refusal to answer my letter, I determined to proceed, without delay, to Acre.

ship Globe, of Boston, being at Norfolk Sound, a short time previous to his leaving the N. W. Coast for Canton was informed that the Native Indians had attacked the Russian establishment at that place; massacred all the inhabitants and burnt the Fort and other buildings to the ground.
This event is supposed to have taken place between the 15th and 30th of July last."

The Legislature of this state have recently ceded to the U. States the jurisdiction of two Islands situated on Long Island Sound; called the Great and little Gull Islands. A light house is soon to be erected on one of them. This will greatly benefit the navigation of the Sound.

PHILADELPHIA, April 3.

19th Feb. to a merchant in this City.

the Quarantine in this port, on vessels coming from Philadelphia and Baltimore, was taken off yesterday evening, in consequence of orders from London. In the ports of Spain they continue to order off all vessels from the United States, that have not the Spanish Consuls' certificate to their Bills of Health."

CHARLESTON, March 26.

Capt. Atkins, from Cape Francois, furnishes the following particulars:

On the 10th inst. the brigands made an attack on the national troops at one of their out posts in the plains, but were defeated with considerable loss.

On the 11th, the day that capt. Atkins failed, there was to be a general attack made by the national troops on the brigands in the plains; but how it was decided capt.
Atkins cannot tell, as he sailed early in the morning.

A line of battle ship bound to the leeward, supposed for Port de Paix or Tortugas, and a corvette, supposed to be bound for France with dispatches, failed in co. with capt.
Atkins.

The brig Mary, capt. Barber, from New York bound to Jamaica, was wrecked on the Hogfishes on the 15th February; vessel and cargo lost; the crew took to their boats; the yawl with two men in her, was taken up by the scho. Good Intent, capt. Foster, and carried into Cape Francois on the 5th instant. It is supposed that the remainder of the crew in the long boat, have arrived either at Hemaga, Hispaniola or Tortugas, as the yawl was picked up in sight of the latter place.

NORFOLK, March 31.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Pansum, (Bohemia) to his friend in this town dated January 6th, 1803.
"This country is in a deplorable state, having had no rain for three months past, all the wells are dried up; the Emperor is obliged to have water sent here from the lower parts of the country to keep the people from perishing. A great number of the inhabitants die daily for the want of that article. Rye is at the enormous rate of 6 dollars 37 cents per bushel; one potatoe will sell for a greitzer, (5 farthings) and every thing else in proportion."

Arrived the brig Sarah, capt. Stower, from Jamaica.

Off Cuba, on the 16th March, spoke the brig Sufanna, from Newburyport, bound to New Orleans, out 25 days, all well.

Alexandra Advertiser.

THURSDAY, APRIL 7.

The sloop Columbia, Carr, cleared out from Charleston, for this port, on the 26th March.

Mr. Snowden,

PERMIT me to trouble you with a few lines in reply to Mr. Longden. As he has thought proper to term the communication signed "A Subscriber," an "address to the citizens," and to charge the author with falsehood, and a great deal I cannot comprehend, to which I cannot pretend to reply at present, as I wish to give it a general investigation. Sure it was a treacherous action, to exculpate those refractory fellows from unmerited contempt, because they have offended you, relucting to become the passive animal of a nincompoop. As to your continental adventures, anecdotes, and tory hunting, I should like to be acquainted with them, and whether you marched in van or rear.

This would be entertaining, being new—as none of the American Biographers have done you the justice of handing down your name. But how is it you take credit to yourself on this score, and refuse it to those whose services are imprinted on the hearts of their countrymen, those whose bodies bear testimony of their exertions? As to the rights of man and all that, they are often expressed than respected; but to their rights, and not their wrongs, I can tell you I am as great a friend as you are, yet not a thorough going democrat. I can "give the devil his due." That is, give to every man, whatever his prejudices may be, credit for a good action flowing from worthy motives; and although a man may differ from me in his opinion of men, in the line of their conduct, I am not hardy enough to charge him with baseness, toryism, &c. but this is the general resort of prejudice, the bug-bear standard. I will ask the gentleman wherein "Subscriber" was guilty of falsehood? I request him to point out the particulars. I presume it will be in my power to substantiate what I have advanced, and what appears so grating to the gentleman's feelings, by detailing the proceedings through all their windings.
I am possessed of the materials, and were I a "Hudibras," I should reap the advantages, as I am confident it would surpass the precious (rights of man) militia bill. To conclude, let me tell the gentleman, had he always been as ready to publish what he has wrote, he would not now be the confident and eulogist of the Colonel—But, oh! flattery, oh! vanity, sweet baits, what cannot thou accomplish.

Extract of a letter, dated London, 13th Dec. to a gentleman in Charleston.

"We have several Frenchmen here soliciting our African houses to send eight or ten thousand slaves to Louisiana, and affirming them that they shall be paid in dollars by the return of the vessel; such assurances will not do; the Wise men to whom they apply cut the business very short, saying, we will send you plenty of slaves, but we must have a guarantee in London, for the payment of the dolls.
or pounds sterling."

From a late London Paper.

At a little school at Chapel in Wear-dale, an eccentric character has adopted the following method to teach the children their alphabet: All the furniture in the school room is made after the shape of the four and twenty letters; and if their be a difficult letter or two, he has that part of the furniture altered, to serve as a punishment to the pupil in some shape or other. By these means, our informant assures us they are enabled to learn their letters in a few days.

Quere. May not the method of Father O'Profody have suggested this to our Wear-dale sage? That he may not, however, be accused as a plagiarist, without the means of vindicating himself, we shall detail a sample of the Irish schoolmaster's impressive lesson, to the little puny whip-sters of his school.

Addressing himself to the youngest scholar (who, by the bye, knew as much of the four and twenty letters as he did of longitude) You little O'Shanghnessy, come hither, vid yourself, bring your primer in your hand, and your capper in your fist—blow your nose, and hold your head up like a man—arrah, now, don't be hunting the flies across the ceiling, but cock your eye, and look straight at your book.

You see that letter, which looks for all the world like the gable end of your father's cabin with a beam across it, now that is called A, agufes A:—and that letter, the next door neighbour, is named after the little joinerment that sucks the flowers, fills the honey pots, and carries a long ring at his tail; this is matter B, and B stand for blubber lip; arrah now, what makes you put your lip? Tuck in the sellage of your mouth, blow your nose, and hold up your head like a man. The next is for all the world like the half moon, where Judy Mag-lucery tells a tale and whiskey; and that is called C, and C stands for cobbler or coppers:—And you see that next, that is for all the world like the broken handle of a pair of snuffers, that is called D, and D stands for the daughter, agufes blubber lip cobbler's copper daughter:—And the next is called E, which the English flats (becher, action to them) call E, as there were two of them. By my foot, they may as well say check, handkerchief, instead of check handkerchief, that 'twas both made for the nose flarrah, that's true, blow your nose again.

And the next you see, that is like a gillet with a little plug half way up, for the bargman to let his foot upon (heaven bless you, my dear, and keep your mother's son from the like of it, my jewel I well that is called F, and that stands five:—And that next is what the cormen say when they want their horses to go further, and that is called G.

And if any person should ask you now, which of your hands goes hardest for want of a glove? you may say H, which is the same as both; and stands for horses, and J stands for jockies; and now, my little fellow, snuffe blubber lip, cobbler's copper daughter eat up five gingerbread horses, jockies and all. Oh! mercy upon us, what a devil of a twill I have for schoolship! Now, my jewel, I've taught you one third of your lesson, and I'll teach the other two halves when you have knock'd the first under your seullap!—So now run home vid yourself, before the scallions are up the butter milk and potatoes my jewel!

A Museum is not only an ornament to a city, but it is a continual and abundant source of information for the citizens at large.

Besides, such an enterprize is very in-crative and advantageous to the owner; for it is a real and rich property daily increasing, by the liberal and voluntary gifts from some well spirited men, travellers and navigators, who present that useful establishment with admirable productions of nature and art.

A very considerable revenue yearly in-flows from it: In Boston, New-York and Philadelphia, it is not less than two thousand dollars yearly receipt. Even in the small city of Hartford, (Conn.) a Museum is sufficient to support the family of a gentleman formerly a minister. As Alexandria is fast increasing in commerce and population, the institution of a Museum will add to the importance and splendor of the town, and would be of great advantage to the owner.

Notice is hereby given,

That on Tuesday the second day of next court, to be held in this present month, for Fairfax county, the erection of a POOR HOUSE for this county, will be let to the lowest bidder, by the Commissioners for that purpose appointed. Bond and good security for the faithful performance will be required of the undertaker.

Any person desirous of seeing the plan, and of being informed of the dimensions and manner in which the work must be performed, are referred to Col.
James Wren, who will give them the necessary information relative thereto, payments, &c.

By order of the Commissioners.

The subscriber has to inform the inhabitants of Alexandria and its vi-

COW POX matter from the Vaccine In-tion superintended by Dr. Waterhouse, who, to his immortal credit, and with just claim to the sincere thanks of his fellow citizens, has paid more accurate, judicious and disinterested attention to this valuable discovery, than any other medical man in America; the subscriber has tried the matter alluded to in a number of instances, and in every one it has succeeded with as much readiness, certainty and mildness, as could possibly be wished for; it has also been tried by several other medical men with like success; his principal object in this advertisement is to inform such persons and families, as may not find themselves able, or easily able, to pay of feeling a sincere and ardent interest in the propagation of the benefits of so imfrom all expenses whatever, provided proper application be made to him for that purpose, at his shop in Prince Street.

lar; and the improvements are a comfortable dwelling house, kitchen, smoke house, stables, &c. &c. with several fine springs of water, together with a fine young orchard of peach and apple trees, and the situation considered remarkably healthy.

Any person wishing to view the land, may be shown it, by applying to Edward Washington Esquire, who now has it in possession, until Christmas next, when it will be delivered up to the purchaser.

The advantage of cutting Cord Wood from this land is very great, there being a great abundant and navigation near at hand.
The terms of sale will be for approved paper, payment at two, four and six months.
